A Star Will Rise
The Kamala Harris Prophecies

We're Getting Closer

Even though we know it's coming every four years, presidential election season is coming to a climax and this cycle is more than a tad unusual. Some call it unpredictable while others say they saw this coming four years ago. And for those of us in the prophetic community we're spending time looking back to try and get a clearer look forward to what is going to happen on November 5th. Regardless of what happens, prognosticators are out and about cluttering our social media feeds with theories, stats, trends, and for those of us who try and sort through the myriad of words that people say they're getting from God, prophecies that hopefully clear things up for us. Yes, I'm fully aware of the wave of doubters who point to this book or that peer reviewed paper telling us there's nothing to the supernatural and these foretellers are no better than the friends psychic hotline. But I've been a Christian long enough to see evidence in my own life that God does speak to His people and dismissing His prophetic counsel isn't a smart thing. Instead of going back and re-watching The Simpson's episodes, which by the way appears to have "predicted" the Kamala Harris frenzy in their "Bart to the Future" as you can read in an article from the Los Angeles Times, we can still turn to the Bible and the prophets who God really does speak to for guidance.

He Really Does Speak To Them

Surely the Lord God does nothing, Unless He reveals His secret to His servants the prophets.
(Amos 3:7, NKJV)

This verse rose to prominence over 4 years ago when all the Donald Trump reelection words started to come out and people needed to hang their hats on verses that lifted up the prominence of all the so-called YouTube prophets. Now, taken in context, it's not a pretty thing to use as it speaks of the impending doom of Israel for being a wayward and backslidden people, but the point is made that God is full of mercy when He warns anyone of what is coming if they don't repent. While many prophecies are conditional where God offers us a choice, many times to turn from our wicked ways and He will forgive or not repent and face the judgment, some are telling us what will happen and to prepare for it. Neither is bad and both are expressions of His love and care for us if we realize that He is love and the heart of prophecy is His love. As a little sidebar, pray for these intrepid seers as they put themselves and their reputations out there to speak what they hear from Him. It's not easy to publish things that often seem ridiculous and even laughable at the time, and in some cases, scary and fearful. But getting back to the point, our Heavenly Father is speaking to us and we would do well to perk up and listen.

And About Kamala

When Joe Biden finally announced he was no longer seeking reelection all eyes turned to Kamala Harris. And it made sense. She seemed to be the logical choice since she was Biden's running mate both in 2020 and in 2024. But the kingmakers in the proverbial smoke filled backrooms hadn't all united behind her until Obama finally did. From the earthly perspective the political world is speaking and another woman will be running for the highest office in the land once again. She will also be running against the same man who defeated the last woman to hold that position so history could be repeating itself again. However, just as in past American elections in recent times we predictably want to see if there are prophetic words to hang our hats on. As it turns out, there may be some. Author and Bible prophecy teacher Perry Stone talked about one such prophetic word in a video he published 3 years ago. The contents of the video are summarized in an article found on Charismanews.com:

In a three-year-old video that recently went viral, evangelist Perry Stone discussed a 1933 vision by the late William Branham, an evangelist known for his prophetic insights. According to Stone, Branham foresaw several significant events, including a prediction that a woman would hold high power in the United States, potentially as president. This has led some to speculate about Kamala Harris, the current Vice President, as a possible fulfillment of this prophecy.

Perry first brought people up to speed about Branham:

Stone described Branham as a man with a “tremendous gift that God had given him,” emphasizing that those who knew Branham personally believed he “never missed his words of wisdom, words of knowledge, prophecies, or if he said he had a vision.” Among the visions recorded by Branham was one in which he saw a future leader of the United States as a woman. Stone noted, “A woman will take the place of a president or something great in high power in America,” adding that this could be a sign of significant changes to come.

This prophetic word, which I’ve talked about in a previous video:

Branham’s vision also included technological predictions, such as the development of driverless cars, which he described as looking “like an egg” and being controlled by something other than a steering wheel, possibly resembling modern autonomous vehicles. Stone remarked, “Now folks, listen to me, we’re here,” suggesting that these advancements align with Branham’s predictions from nearly a century ago.

Stone did make the possible connection to Harris and making sure we knew that we won’t know for certain until it actually happens:

The video goes on to consider the possibility of Harris rising to the presidency, particularly given President Biden’s age and health concerns. Stone stated, “Even the secular media has said he will stay in for a certain period of time; he’ll step down,” implying that Harris could potentially fulfill Branham’s prophecy... Stone continued his message by echoing this command from the Bible, noting the uncertain nature of these predictions, “Only time will tell if this is the season... where she would step in.”

Another Vision About Harris

Now we turn to another prophetic word, this time from 2017, September 26th to be exact, and the vision was given to Charlie Shamp. The prophet was actually ministering in California at the time when he had this vision:

I was praying and suddenly I found myself in the Spirit looking for what was to come. In my eyes I could see the state of California and a rising star. I heard the Lord say, “behold the woman that will rise from the West!” I look to see a light skinned black woman standing before me with authority poised to take political power.

He then knew exactly who this woman was:

It was Kamala Harris, she will rise from California as a bright star in the coming days. The Lord said unto me, “She has been hand picked by some in power as a queen to trump President Trump in 2020.

Of course looking back we see how far this rise to prominence happened. However, the vision would go on to pull back the veil of the plans for her by those putting her in power:

This is their hidden vision that has yet to unfold. They will use her to grab the hearts of people in the nation and attempt to create momentum and build a political bridge from the east to the west. They will set her on a course to make major waves in the country for a time.

But Shamp then saw a change in her, one that he in interviews from 2019 would only happen if the church will pray for her:

Her eyes will be opened and her heart will be changed when she sees that they have played her as a pawn in a political game only to put forth a rook in an attempt to upset a king, in the end this plan will fail.

Of course just how this will play out, we don't know, but just as they used Biden we can see how they are doing the same to Harris. The vision went on to say this:

She will be broken as a result of this reality, through this I will show her my mercy and teach her about true justice.

This actual process is seen all throughout the Bible so it's not unusual for God to use it with Harris. As in almost all lives that God uses, she will have to decide which way she will go:

Her political future will be hung in the balance and I will present her with a choice to choose a difficult road. One that will build bridges across enemy lines and forge friendships from common political rivals, she is my bridge builder. I will use her to build new political alliances that help those in need in the nation.

The prophecy then moves to how Harris will be used, perhaps even by those on the right who now loathe her:

Where she was once hated by some she will be seen as a trusted ally and praised as she brings justice to the poor of the country. My destiny for her life is that she fulfill the promise that she made to her mother when she was young.

Again, there is that conditional element involved:

If she chooses I will lead her down this difficult path to seal the legacy of her father and mother. In the end she will be remembered for the advancement of civil rights and economic justice among Americans.

We Play A Part

It shouldn't come as a surprise that we as the Church, the Body of Christ need to play a part in the process of how He moves. I could go into a lot of details from a great deal of prophetic words starting back in even 2016 that always point out that Christians need to pray for things to change. It is this relationship that God ordained to change His children as He changes the world around them. And it is encapsulated in this very familiar verse from the Old Testament:

...if my people, who are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and I will forgive their sin and will heal their land. (2 Chron 7:14, NIV)

You see, I really do believe that these prophetic words all hinge on people's prayers more often than not. While I'm not broaching all the Donald Trump words about getting elected again in 2020 or even in 2024 which I will probably do in another video, Shamp in an interview in 2019 did make this case for the churches responsibilities for this Harris vision. But I don't really need Him to tell us this since the Word is replete with so many examples of this partnership with God and His children. Suffice it to say that if we want God to move His hand in the upcoming election we need to spend more time in our prayer closets than at the ballot box. To passively sit back and do, as some are saying, buy some popcorn to watch the show of the enemy's implosion is neither a good thing nor a Biblical thing. Tempting, though it may be to do, we need to be less entertained and more inspired to intercede. And when it comes to this election season, praying for God to have His way is truly the best thing we can do.
